WILL IT CURE ME?

Said a man whose woe-begone countenance and broken down constitution showed traces of disease—a sufferer with Nervous Dyspepsia, in whose stomach the most delicate morsel lay like lead. Refreshing sleep and quiet nerves were strangers to him, and he despaired of ever being well. We advised him to take which he did, and in a short time was not only relieved but cured.

Reader, if you are suffering with Dyspepsia or Liver Disease in any form do not wait until the disease has taken a fast hold upon you, but use the Regulator when the symptoms first show themselves. It has relieved untold suffering. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is not an alchoholic stimulant, but a

that will cure when everything else fails. It is a faultless family medicine. Does not disarrange the system. Is no violent drastic purge, but nature's own remedy. The friend of everyone, and will not disappoint you. A single trial will convince you that it is the cheapest, purest and best Family Medicine in the world.

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, bilious sufferers, victim of fever and ague, the mercurial diseased patient how they recovered their health, cheerful spirits and good appetite—they will tell you by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator.

Poetical.

THE TRIPLE PLEA.

Law, Physic and Divinity,
Being in dispute; could not agree
To settle which of all the three
Should have superiority.

Law pleads, he doth protect men's lands,
And all their goods, from ravenous hands,
Therefore of right, challengeth he
To have superiority.

Physic prescribes receipts for health,
Which men prefer above their wealth.
Therefore of right, challengeth he
To have superiority.

Then straight steps up the priest demure,
Who for men's souls proclaims the cure,
Therefore of right, challengeth he
To have superiority.

If judge's end this triple plea,
The lawyers sure will gain the fee;
If epicures the verdict give,
The doctors best of all will thrive.

If bishops arbitrate the case,
The priest will have the highest place;
If honest, sober, wise men judge,
Then all the three away may trudge.

If men will live in peace and love,
The lawyer's acts they need not prove;
If men forbear excess and riot,
They need not feed on doctors' diet.

If men attend what God doth teach,
They need not mind what parsons preach;
But if men knaves and fools will be,
They'll be hard ridden by all three.

Select Story.

THE HUNTON THE HIGHWAY.

There was a shrewd robber somewhere. The farm houses were robbed; shops were robbed; the tills at the bars of the wayside inns were robbed, and the people had their pockets picked. All this happened in the region between Sidney and Lowstone—not a field of vast extent—and yet the robber or robbers could not be found. Officers had searched in every direction, and several suspicious looking individuals had been apprehended; but the real culprit remained at large. One day the mail was robbed, and on the next a man had his pocket picked of five hundred pounds, while riding in the stage coach—for my narrative dates back to the old coaching days. The money had been carried in his breast pocket, and he knew it was stolen from him while he was enjoying a doze on the road.

I had been confined to my house by a severe cold for several days, and was not fit to go out now; but as this matter was becoming serious, I felt it my duty to be on the move, and accordingly I fortified my throat and breast with warm flannel, and set forth. I had no settled plan in my mind, for I had not yet been upon the road, and was not thoroughly posted up. A ride of five miles brought us to Sidney, and thence I meant to take a coach to Lowstone, where Sam Stickney, one of the most shrewdest of men lived. Stickney had already been on the search, and I wanted to consult him, before making any decided movements. I reached Sidney at half past five in the morning and the coach left at six. Lowstone was sixty miles distant, so I had a good ride before me. During the early part of the day I rode upon the box with a driver, and from him I gained considerable information touching on the various robberies that had been committed. He was forced to admit that several people had been robbed in his stage, though he declared he couldn't see into it, for he had not the remotest idea even of whom it could be.

We reached Bouniville at noon, where we stopped to dine, and when we left his place I was the only passenger. At the distance of twelve miles at a little village called Cawthorne, we stopped to change horses, and here another passenger got up. I had been occupying the forward seat, as that happened to be wider than the others, and gave me a better opportunity for lying down; and when the newcomer entered, he took the back seat. He was a young man, I judge, and not very tall in stature, but so completely was he bundled up in shawls and mufflers, that his size of frame was not easily determined. He was very pale and coughed badly; and I at once made up my mind that he was far less fit to travel than I was. After we had got fairly on our way, I remarked to him that I had been suffering from a severe cold and that this was the first time that I had ventured out for quite a large number of days. He looked at me out of a pair of dark bright eyes; and when he seemed to have determined what manner of man I was, he said:

"I have something worse than a cold, sir." He broke into a fit of coughing, which lasted a minute or so, and then added: "It won't be a great while before I shall take my last ride."

Again he was seized with a spasm of coughing, and when he recovered from it he continued, "the disease is eating me up and shaking me to pieces at the same time. He further informed me that he had started on a tour for his health, and that he had given it up, and was now on his way home, which place he was anxious to reach as soon as possible. Another paroxysm seized him at this point, and intimated that he was unable to converse, as the effort brought on the cough. I had noticed this, and had made up my mind to trouble him no more, even before he had given me the hint.

After this he drew his outer shawl about his neck and face; he closed his eyes and I was not long following his example. Toward the middle of the forenoon the coach stopped at a small village, where we changed horses again, and where four passengers got in. This broke up the arrangement of my friend and self for rest, as he had to take one of the strangers on his seat The new comers soon broached the subject of the robberies, which had been committed in that region, and I listened to gain information, if possible; but they knew no more than any one else knew. They had heard all about it and were inflated with wonder.

One, an old farmer, asked me if I knew anything of the robbery. I told him that I knew but little of the affair anyway, having been sick and unable to be out among folks. Then he asked my consumpted friend if he knew anything about it. The latter raised his head from its inclining position, and was on the point of answering, when we heard our driver, in quick, abrupt tones, ordering some one to get out of the road. I instinctively put my head out of the window to see what the trouble was, and my eyes was just quick enough to detect a load of fagots, in time to dodge back and escape them. The road was quite narrow at this point, and as the fagots were loaded very widely, it was impossible for the driver to wholly avoid them, and the side of the coach was swept by them quite smartly I escaped without being touched, but not so my friend. I heard an exclamation, I thought rather a profane one, from his lips, and on looking toward him I saw that one of the fagots had struck him over the left eye making quite a mark upon the pale skin. This incident turned the conversation from the subject of the robberies, and it was not again alluded to during the day.

We reached Lowstone shortly after dark, and I went at once to the residence of Mr. Stickney, whom I found at home. He had been out all day, and made all sorts of efforts to obtain some clue to the perpetration of the robberies that were being committed but without effect.

He said that he could learn nothing on which to hang suspicion. Two shops had been robbed in his town, but he could get no clue to the perpetrators. We consulted together, and finally proposed to go on in the morning and see another detective officer named Gamlit, who resided about twelve miles distant, in the town of Orton.

This met the view of my host, and so we left the matter for the evening. On the following morning we were up early and as the coach would take us directly to Gamlit's house, we chose that mode of conveyance, and repaired at a reasonable hour to the tavern for that purpose. When we reached the inn, we found the old farmer, who had been one of my fellow passengers on the night before, stepping about the door in a state of excitement. He had been robbed of three hundred pounds, and he was sure it must have been done in the stage, for he had slept with his pocket book under his pillow. He had not thought to look into it when he retired, but he had found it empty this morning, when he got up. He said the wallet had been taken from his pocket and put back again—he was sure—he knew it. As soon as he saw me he was anxious I should be searched. Of course I allowed the operation to be done willingly. After the excitement was all allayed, I asked him where the pale young man was that came in the coach, and was told by the landlord that he went away soon after the coach came.

My first aim was to satisfy myself that the old man had been robbed in the stage coach, and of this he succeeded in convincing me. After this my suspicion rested on the consumptive man, and if I found the man I had the rogue. So I bade the landlord to keep a sharp look out; and also spoke to the driver who had brought me from Sidney, and who was now on the point of returning, requesting him, if he saw anything of the pale man, to see that he was secured. The suspicious individual had only remained at the inn a few minutes on the previous evening, and had then gone away in a gig which had come for him; but no one could tell what direction he had taken.

The coach for Orton soon came to the door, and we took our seats inside, the farmer having determined to remain where he was until he heard something about the money. There were two other passengers inside, and two or three outside, but they were strangers to me. We had gone two or three miles when the driver pulled up before a small farm house, where a woman and a trunk were waiting by the garden gate. The lady was handed into the coach and took a seat facing me, and as she turned to give the driver some directions about the baggage, she threw her veil over her bonnet. She was pretty, very pretty, with rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes. Her hair hung in glossy brown ringlets over her neck and shoulders, and was a type of beauty in itself. I looked at the rosy cheeks again, and into her dark lustrous eyes. My gaze was fixed upon this latter when she caught my glance and quickly droped her veil. At first I felt a little ashamed at having been caught staring at her so boldly; but as the face was hidden from sight, and I had an opportunity for reflecting, it struck me that I had seen those features before.

Here was a study for me and I was buried in it at once. Where had I seen that face. I whispered to Stickney, and asked him if he had ever seen her before. He said he had not, and joked me for being so curious about a pretty face. We stopped at a place called 'Turner's,' in the edge of Orton to exchange mails, and here I jumped out to see the post master who was an old friend of mine, and as I was returning to the coach the thought struck me to look at the trunk which had been last put on and see if any name was on it. It was marked with the simple initials "A. M." so that was all that I gained from that source. As I came to the coach door I approached from behind, and as I cast my eyes up, I found that the beauty had her veil raised, and was looking in the post office, as though anxious for the mail to come, that we might be off. The expression of anxiety detracted somewhat from her beauty, and as I looked upon her now, seeing her face in a different light, I was struck with a snake-like cast, which was perceptible in the whole character of her features. I was on the point of withdrawing my gaze, lest she should catch it a second time when a slight motion of her head rolled her curls over her temple and I saw a faint line, something like a vein, over her left eye. It was a mark—a livid scratch—where something had struck her. It might have been the stroke of a whip. But—no; I quickly glided back behind the coach, and there I reflected. Such a mark as that could be made by a fagot!

When I returned to my seat in the coach, the fair passenger's veil was again down. Could it be possible that my suspicions were correct, and that chance had thrown in my way a solution of the problem which had vexed my deputies so much? Yes, I was sure of it, and the more I compared the two faces in my mind the more I saw the resemblance. Either these checks had been painted red to-day or they had been painted white yesterday. The eyes were the same, and that brow with the tell tale mark, not to be mistaken.

We soon stopped at the door of the inn at Orton. The driver announced that they would stop there ten or fifteen minutes, to exchange horses and wait for the mail, and also informed the passengers that they would find plenty of accommodations in the house, if they chose to go in.

The lady at first did not get out, but at length she did so, and went into the hotel. I determined now to find out who she was. I left my deputy at the door of the room she entered, having ordered him to rush in, in case he should hear any thing that would warrant intrusion. On going into the apartment, I found the beauty sitting by the window gazing out between the blinds. She started up as I entered, and let her veil fall.

"I thought this was a private room, sir," she said. Her voice trembled and sounded unnatural.

"It may be," I resumed, "but that does not exclude those who have business. I came on purpose to see you."

There was a momentary struggle, and then she appeared as calm as could be.

"What are you?" she asked.

"I am an officer from Bow street," I replied; and I want to know who you are."

"Stop one moment," she said; and as she spoke she carried her hand beneath her cloak. It was quickly withdrawn, and in it was a pistol, but she had grasped a portion of her dress with it, and before she could clear it, I had sprung upon her and seized her by the arm. But it was her no longer. There were more muscles in that slight body than I had bargained for. However, my man popped in the moment he heard the scuffle, and the beauty was soon secured. The glossy brown tresses fell off during the tussel, and some of the paint was removed from the cheeks.

And as soon as the prisoner was secured I had the trunk taken off and brought in, and upon overhauling the contents, we found disguises of all sorts, and quite a sum of money, besides watches and jewelry of great value. I made him assume a proper male attire, and when he stood forth in 'propria persona' I found that he had not only used red paint for the blushing beauty of to-day, but he had applied more cadaverous coloring matter for the consumptive individual of yesterday. As he stood now he was a small built, intelligent looking youth, but with a cold blooded expression upon his marble countenance, and an evil look in his dark eyes.

We carried him back to Lowstone, where we found the money of the old farmer upon him, besides other money that had been lost by different individuals. At first he told strange stories of himself, but finally, when he knw that the worst must come, he confessed the whole. He was from London, and had come out into the country on purpose to rob. He had two confederates with him who helped him from place to place. One of them had taken him from the inn the night before and the other had brought him and set him down at the farmer's gate that morning. We made search for these confederates, but they had got wind of their principal's arrest, and were not to be found.

However, we got the chief sinner, and had broken up the game. After he had been found guilty and sentenced, he seemed to enjoy himself hugely in telling how he had deceived the good people of the country. Now he would turn himself into the old woman who had given the driver so much trouble about her band-box. Then he would be a meek-browed minister, who had distributed tracts to the passengers, and picked their pockets while they read. Then he would draw himself into the little old hump-backed man, who had been lifted into and out of the coach, and robbed the helpers while they fixed his crutches for him. It was funny, very, and perhaps we might never haver caught him but for the accident of the fagot. That was so funny for him; and I doubt if he found much fun working at our hard stone, hammering early and late, with an inexorable master over him to stir him up when he flagged.

Speer's Horehound Rye and Rock.

Made of old pearl rye, rock candy crystal, and the horehound herb, a simple and effective remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness and sore throats, highly recommended for consumptives. This is no patent medicine mixture, but it is the pure extract of rye, horehound and rock candy, combined with one other medicine much used by consumpties. Sold by C. A. Kleim.

Selling Hay.

A great many good farmers regard it as heterodox to sell hay, and situated as most of them are, distant from market, they are wise in rigidly adhering to the plan of concentrating the hay into good beef, pork, milk, butter, etc., before selling. There is a double advantage in this, viz: getting a better price for the hay, and increasing the manure supply. But sometimes it is more profitable to sell the hay and buy manure, and very often it is better to sell hay and buy bran, oil cake, etc., both for feed and manure.

We came across a case recently, that we will illustrate. A farmer had twelve acres of timothy meadow that yielded, last year, thirty tons of hay, which was all saved in excellent order. He sold twenty tons of it at $10 per ton, making $360 total, or $30 per acre, with ten tons to feed on the farm. This hay was hauled about twelve miles to market, during the winter, and as the work was done without hiring and not neglecting other work, it was not counted in expenses. This man keeps cows and sells milk, and invests a part of the money received for hay, in bran and middlings, which he hauls home instead of returning empty laden, when hauling hay. He had five acres in fodder corn that yielded according to his own estimate, fifteen tons of forage as good as an equal amount of hay, and furnishing all the coarse feed he needed, or all that he desired to feed; for he claims that it is more profitable to feed some grain, bran, etc., to all kinds of stock.

This meadow is naturally rich—a black loam—but he gives it a dressing of superphosphate every year, using about 200 pounds per acre, and in addition, puts on some ashes, lime and salt, in occasional years. He puts salt, ashes and lime on in the fall, late, and superphosphate in the spring. His barnyard manure is used on other crops. This year the drouth affected the grass severely in this section, but he cut about two tons per acre from this meadow. He has sold hay from this meadow for ten years past, and it would be hard work to convince him that it is not profitable, or that he is impoverishing his land by his management.—Practical Farmer.

Be Wise and Happy.

If you will stop all your extravagant and wrong notions in doctoring yourself and families with expensive doctors or humbug cure-alls, that do harm always, and use only nature's simple remedies for all your ailments—you will be wise, well and happy, and save great expense. The greatest remedy for this, the great, wise and good will tell you, is Hop Bitters—rely on it. See another column.—Press.

The Greenfield Ghost.

Greenfield, Ohio, has a real ghost. There cannot be the least doubt about it, for a local minister, while conducting a revival meeting the other day, told his hearers that the ghost was a supernatural visitor sent to warn the people of the near approach of the end of the world. As the same minister also professes his belief in the alleged words of the prophetess Shipton, his intelligence and judgment cannot be called in question, and we must join the Greenfielders in the genuineness of their ghost.

In the opinion of the woman of Greenfield, the ghost is by far the worst that has ever made its appearance. There have been, according to ghost-seers, all sorts of undesirable ghosts. Such were the ghosts that threw things at innocent people, and smashed crockery; the ghosts that came and stood by the peoples bed in the dead of night without having the decency to knock at the door or to say what they wanted; and the ghost that rattled chains and thumped and thumped on the floor overhead merely in order to make themselves disagreeable. The Greenfield ghost is, in local feminine estimation, more wicked than any of her predecessors—for she is a female ghost. It is her loathsome habit to waylay young men in the midnight streets to kiss them and then to vanish. Often she throws herself upon young men who are on their way to visit young ladies, and so terrifies them that they flee to their homes or bording houses, leaving the unhappy young ladies to watch the front door bell in vain expectation. Conduct such as this is to the last degree revolting to every well brought-up young woman, and we can understand why the Greenfield ghost is firmly beleived by one-half of Greenfield to belong to the satanic host.

Among the young men of the town the ghost is, as a rule, greatly dreaded. It must be remembered that Greenfield is an Ohio town, and, as we have learned during the last four years, Ohio is a State inhabited exclusively by men of the loftiest principle, the clearest intellect and the most shrinking modesty. Were a female ghost of not unattractive appearance to infest a New York or New England village and to violently kiss belated young men, it is probable that ninety-nine of every hundred local young men would walk the streets of that town all night and betray not the slightest fear of the ghost. In Ohio, as has been said, a total different variety of young men exists, and young men of Greenfield, with few exceptions, declare that there is no more terrible wild fowl than a female ghost who lawlessly kisses persons to whom she is a total stranger.

Those who have seen the Greenfield ghost are numberless, and their testimony as to her conduct is unvarying. On the night of the 12th of January, young Mr. Smithers, assistant pastor of a recently developed variety of Baptists, was met by the ghost at 9:30 o'clock. He asserts that she approached him from behind with noiseless steps, threw her arms around him, and kissed him before he could call for help. He instantly broke loose and fled to his home, where he was at once put to bed and a physician was summoned, who afterward said that the nervous shock which the patient had sustained might easily have proved fatal. Two nights later, and at about the same hour, Mr. Edward Potter, one of the most respected young men

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, February 25, 1881.

At the end of the county statement in this issue will be found a correction of a clerical error, by which the balance in the county Treasurer's hands is increased $18. In the hurried manner in which the several accounts have to be closed up at the end of the year such an error easily occurs. The auditors did not notice it, but Mr. J. B. Casey, commissioners clerk, discovered it, and proceeds to correct it.

A SENATOR ELECTED.

The dead lock in the Legislature was broken on Tuesday by the selection of Hon. John I. Mitchell of Tioga county as candidate for the United States Senate, by the joint committee of the two factions of the Republican party. On Wednesday he was elected by a party vote. The Legislature will now have a chance to do some work for the people who sent them there.

AN OFF YEAR.

Next fall the people of this county will elect a Prothonotary, Register and Recorder, three county commissioners, two associate judges, and a county treasurer. As this is an off year in politics, it behooves the Democratic party to be very careful in the selection of candidates for the several offices, for experience has shown that where there is any suspicion of an unfair nomination, the independent voter comes out in force, and on several occasions has succeeded in breaking the slate. Such results tend to weaken the party, and ought never to occur in a county that has a clear Democratic majority on Presidential election of over 2300 The campaign will soon open, and there will undoubtedly be a long list of candidates for each of the offices to be filled. As yet we do not know who they may be, but there will be among them enough good men to fill the positions with satisfaction to the people. Whoever they may be, we warn them now that they must secure their nominations by honest means, if they would be elected. At the delegate election Democrats should vote for the best man, and should be very careful to choose delegates to the convention whose characters are such that no man will dare to approach them with offers of a pecuniary consideration for votes. With delegates who cannot be bought, and with candidates who will not attempt to buy them, the whole county ticket will be elected by the usual majority. We do not know of our own knowledge of nominations improperly obtained, but we do know that the charge of paying delegates for votes has been made, and has resulted in the defeat of regular candidates. Let the nominations of this year be made honestly and fairly; let all independent candidates be frowned down, and then above all, let us have a full vote for the nominees. If they are selected without suspicion of fraud they will be entitled to the support of the party and will receive it.

Inaugural Preparations.

Preparations for the inauguration of President Garfield on a scale of magnificence hitherto unknown in Washington are going on rapidly, and many distinguished men from all parts of the country are expected to be present. The military and civic displays will excel in numbers as well as brilliancy any former demonstration of the kind, while the attendance of private individuals will run up into thousands and tens of thousands.

Colonel Corbin, the corresponding secretary of the inaugural executive committee, has received the following letter from Gen. W. S Hancock; "I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the invitation of the executive committee on inaugural ceremonies to myself and staff to be present in Washington, D. C., on the 4th of March next and participate in the ceremonies and festivities incident to the inauguration of General James A. Garfield as President of the United States. My staff have individually been notified of the invitation, and should I conclude to be present I will notify you later. Thanking you, and through you the gentlemen of the committee, for their courteous attention, I remain very truly yours."

General Hancock is the military commander of the district and has been requested to come as a citizen. The late Democratic candidate has some doubts as to the propriety of his being present, for reasons which have their foundation in his respect for General Garfield rather than in any disinclination on account of being a defeated candidate. The friends of General Hancock, almost to a man, seriously object to his taking part in the ceremonies, either as a civilian or soldier. They think his presence would cause trouble because of the great share of attention he might receive. Were he to appear at the head of the column, following General Sherman, he would be the recipient of nearly as great an ovation as the new President, and the Republicans are really not anxious to have him here, fearing some ill-advised persons might do something which would be construed as an insult to Garfield.

A case of more than ordinary interest has been decided by Judge Jenks in the Brookville, Jefferson county, Court. It was the petition of Dr. M. B. Lowry for a mandamus to compel the School Board of Brookville borough to admit his children to the public schools they having been dismissed by the Principal because of a refusal on the part of the father to allow them to comply with the rules of the school, the issue being the desire on the part of the doctor that his children should not take the usual lessons in writing while in attendance at school. The case was ably argued, the whole scope of the teacher's authority being reviewed, and great interest surrounded the case. The opinion of the judge is quite lengthy, in which he cites the law relative to the case, and concludes by refusing a mandamus, and ordering that each party shall pay their own costs, but no responsibility on the part of the directors. This ending of the case will be valuable to other Boards of Directors and to teachers generally, as it defines their powers; and parents will also be guided by it, the conclusion arrived at being that they surrender all authority over their children when they pass within the doors of the public school building, the teacher assuming authority to dictate their studies as well as their deportment

THE GRAVES OF SMITH AND MILLER.—When the body of Smith, who was executed at Williamsport, arrived at Jersey Shore it was taken to the house of his brother-in-law, a short distance below the borough, and that night it was carried to a grave which had been prepared for it on land owned by relatives and secretly buried. And it is said that only those who buried him know where the grave is. This secrecy has been observed for fear the body would be exhumed for dissecting purposes. Mrs. Miller's body was taken direct to the Pine Creek burying ground and there laid by the side of her murdered husband as she had requested. And it is reported that relatives have found it necessary to watch the grave at night to prevent the body from being stolen and sent to some medical college.

James Gronpel fell from a trestle about twelve feet high, in Clearfield county, the other day, and broke his neck. Instead of instantaneous death, as is ordinarily the case, physician thinks he will recover. He remains in a sitting proture and has fasened to his neck a contrivance for the purpose of keeping his head in the same position till the injured parts become united,

Dr. Mary Walker was given work by a subordinate of the Treasury Department. The Secretary of the Treasury refused to confirm her appointment, and she was told to go; but every morning for weeks she made her appearance at the department, insisting that she had been employed for one year, and finally had to be forcibly ejected. The first controller of the Treasury has now decided that she is entitled to one year's pay and she will be given $900. It is a great triumph for the little doctor to say nothing of the money.

On Monday Mr. Knittle introduced a bill in the Legislature, providing for additional copies of Smull's Hand Book, and Mc Vanderslice introduced one requiring the assessment of livery stable keepers, and imposing a penalty on persons hiring horses and vehicles of livery stable keepers who have not been licensed.

James Reilly received on Wednesday one of the Balke Billiard tables and has set it up in the room back of the barber shop. It is a quiet spot, and the lovers of that game will find it a pleasant place to while away an hour. The table is one of the best. Give Reilly a share of patronage.

We will publish the charge of Judge Elwell to the jury in the case of the Commonwealth against Cleaver, as soon as Court Stenographer Walker can find time to write it up for us. He is very busy at present writing out the testimony in a long case in Wyoming county. The charge referred to discusses the relative rights and duties of parents and school teachers.

Isaac Evans, of Rohrsburg, was seized with a fainting fit on Friday afternoon last, while talking with his wife on the court house steps. He fell down and struck his head on the stone steps, cutting a gash and knocking him senseless. When he fell, his wife rushed into the court room and called for assistance, and there was great commotion for a few moments until the cause of her alarm was ascertained. We learn that Mr. Evans was not seriously injured.

The jury in the last case tried in court on Saturday, Grim against Stephenson, took a strange freak. The Judge charged them in such a way that they should have rendered a verdict for the plaintiff without leaving the box. Instead of that they went out and after remaining some time came in with a verdict for the defendant. A motion for a new trial was made, and will probably be granted as the verdict was against the evidence, and the law as laid down by the court.

Mr. E. K. Rollins and family left this town on Tuesday morning, for Scranton, where they will make their residence. Mr. Rollins has been in business here for some years and has gained the reputation of being a thorough business man, a first-class mechanic, and an enterprising citizen. The firm of which he was a member, Rollins & Holmes, afterwards Rollins, Holmes & Schuyler, are well known through this section of the State, having taken many contracts for steam heating in public buildings and private dwellings in different places. All their work has given entire satisfaction. Holmes and Schuyler continue the business. We wish Mr. Rollins abundant success in his new field.

C. F. Knapp attended the meeting of the Grand Council of Royal Super-Excellent and Select Masters of Pennsylvania, at Altoona on the 16th inst. He was the first Grand Eminent Commander of Pennsylvania who was ever publicly installed, which transpired in Reading in 1860 at which time the first procession of the Knights Templar was held. All the M. P. Grand Masters since the organization of the Council in 1846 were present at the meeting except Alfred Creigh, of Washington county, who was the first M. P. Grand Master and served fifteen years. He was kept at home by old age, being over eighty years old. Mr. Knapp succeeded him and also served fifteen years.

A THRILLING STORY SPOILED.

The story about those two men and a dog coming down the North Branch on a cake of ice who were to be rescued at Harrisburg was a canard. Mr. Van Alen and others, who were on the down Lackawanna and Bloomsburg passenger train on that morning, going to Sunbury, were positive they saw the men, and upon the arrival of the train at Northumberland Mr. Van Alen stopped the nail works and had his men take ropes and go to the mythical men's rescue (including the dog). The hands of the Philadelphia and Erie shops at Catawissa also stopped work and went to the rescue. When the passengers saw what they supposed was the floating men they were near the south shore. Hundreds of persons lined the shores to see the men coming down, and be prepared for their rescue, but they did not come. After close investigation the supposed men turned out to be several pine bushes sticking up through the ice and high water.

A GOOD STUDY.

The proper study of mankind is man, and the proper cure for sick Headache and Biliousness is Spring Blossom. Prices: $1., 50 cents, and trial bottles 10 cents.

THE NEW BIBLE.—QUICK WORK.

The new version of the New Testament, which has been so many years in course of translation, and which is unquestionably the most important literary enterprise this century has seen, is being waited for with curiosity and anxiety by hundreds of thousands. It is not generally known that a first edition of 500,000 copies has already been manufactured in England and 100,000 copies are said to be already in New York City, not one of them permitted to be sold. They are awaiting a telegram from the authorities in England authorizing their issue. The first copies can only be had at the extravagant price of $10 per copy. The Literary Revolution proposes fully to meet the demands which its army of friends are making upon it by doing probably the quickest work in book-making which has ever yet been accomplished. Arrangements have been fully made to put the entire book into type inside of 24 hours from the time a printed copy of the English edition can be procured, and within three days at least 10,000 copies will be bound ready for delivery to waiting purchasers, and at least 5,000 copies will be manufactured every day thereafter, until the demand is met. It will be printed in large beautiful type, neatly and strongly bound in cloth, in a volume of about 500 pages, and sold at the nominal price of 30 cents. A fine edition in half Russia, gilt top, will be sold for 60 cents, and one in full Turkey morocco, gilt edge, for $1.25. Of course, the popular demand will be enormous. Orders will be filled in the order in which they are received, with remittance. American Book Exchange, New York.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

Few persons so fully appreciate the value of newspaper advertising as those suffering from Biliousness, of Liver complaint, when they read the advertisement of Spring Blossom and try it, Prices: $1., 50 cents, and trial bottles 10 cents

BERWICK LETTER.

Berwick Pa., Feb. 23, '81.

Washington's Birth Day was not observed here this year except by the Bank and Schools. A few large flags alone indicated the difference between this and any other day.

Chaplain McCabe was here on Sunday, officiating in the M. E. Church in the morning and evening. Church extension formed the morning subject, and Woman's Foreign Mission the evening topic.

Last Thursday evening the long looked for lecture by Tilton was listened to by a large and attentive audience. "The World's To-morrow" was his subject, and for an hour and a half he riveted the attention of the delighted audience with his magnificent eloquence. Burdette is expected next.

The Literary Society is more flourishing than ever. Last Saturday evening, a large number of people listened to the discussion on "Do any circumstances warrant a departure from truth." On the affirmative were, K. Kaiser, J. Kurtz and Mr. Hosler, and on the negative, Rev. Kumler, and Dr. H. L. Fress.

Our Chief Burgess has issued a proclamation concerning small pox, advising the citizens not to visit or receive visitors from the infected districts, also, advising vaccination.

BUCKHORN NEWS.

BUCKHORN, Feb 21, 1881.

Rev. Sharetts has just closed an interesting meeting here.

Rev. Savidge is holding a meeting at Rupert. More than twenty have been converted.

On Friday afternoon while Mrs. Julia Ohl was calling at a neighbors, and had left three little children alone, while they were playing with the fire, a little girl three years of age caught fire, and was severely burned. Doubtless the house and children would have been consumed had not the neighbors noticed it. Another warning to mothers.

Who are sorry to note that Mr. Jesse Ohl, who came here from Michigan to visit his brother, is now lying in a critical condition with palsy. There is little hope of his recovery.

Surprise parties seem to be the order of the day. One of about fifty visited the Rev. Clees, of Orangeville. A donation was also tendered Mrs Kate Smith and Anna Beers. These were charitable acts and the donors will please accept thanks.

Mr. Josiah Hoskins, of Wisconsin who has been the guest of Mr. Ralph Ivey this winter, leaves for his home to-morrow. Mr. Hoskins is a gentleman, and during his short stay has made many warm friends. That his journey home may be a safe one is the wish of all.

Eclectic Magazine.

The March number of the ECLECTIC has a varied and interesting table of contents, which shows the advantages of the recent enlargement. It comprises the following articles: "The Dawn of a Revolutionary Epoch," by H. M. Aynman, "On some of Shakespeare's Characters. I. Ophelia," by One who has Personated them (Helen Faucit Martin); "Aerial Navigation," by Dr. William Pole, F. R. S.; "A Day with a War Balloon," by Henry Kisdale, R. E.; "Lord Beaconsfield's Worldly Wisdom;" "Gelat's Grave," a poem, by Matthew Arnold; "Field-Marshal Suwarrow; The Jews in Germany," by the author of "German Home Life;" "George Eliot;" "A Winter's Evening in the Fens;" "Kith and Kin," a novel, by Jessie Fothergill, chapters I. to III.;" "The Prophetic Power of Poetry," by J. C. Shairp, Professor of Poetry at Oxford; "On the Truthfulness of Human Knowledge, (The Unity of the Nature, Part V.), by the Duke of Argyll; "Death and its Superstitions;" "Sainte-Beuve;" Folk Lullabies," by Evelyn Carrington; "Penny Fiction," by James Payn; "The Arts as Farmers;" "Phosphorescence;" and a striking poem by Alexander Anderson, "Drew the Wrong Lever." Besides these there are well-filled editorial departments of Literary Notices, Foreign Literary Notices, Science and Art, and Miscellany.

Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single copy, 45 cents; Trial subscription for three months, $1.

Good Company Number Seventeen.

"Good Company," (Springfield, Mass., $3.0 a year) Number Seventeen, contains an installment of "Rose and the Doctor," the serial by Ellen W. Olney which will be found of marked interest and in which the "plot thickens." There is the usual full compliment of fiction complete in the number. Two of the sketches are about the experience of an investor in Arizona mines, and Achmet, an Egyptian lady's maid, Mr John Burroughs has a collection of brief papers on several topics.

The more substantial material includes the substance of a paper on the higher education of women which was read at Smith College by President D. C. Gilman of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; an article on "Ireland and Irishmen" by Rev. Dr. G. H. Hepworth, one of the committee for the distribution of the "New York Herald" relief fund in Ireland; a graphic summary of the career of the African explorer Henry M. Stanley; and a paper showing up some of the abuses connected with patents and the United States patent right laws.

Of special timeliness are Winter by E. S. Gilbert and an article on George Eliot.

Gen. Beaver is President of the Pennsylvania Argricultural College, which is in such a condition that on the very day the Cameron ring of the Republican party named him for United States Senator, that very day the House of Representatives directed the State Treasurer to withold payment of further appropriations until it is shown that the institution is properly managed.

Crimes in Cumberland.

FOR WHICH FEMALES HAVE SUFFERED THE DEATH PENALTY.

The execution of Mrs. Miller for murder at Williamsport recently and the statement that but eight women have been executed in the State for eighty-six years, has called forth a number of reminiscences of female executions. Rev. Dr. C. P. Wing, of Carlisle, in a communication to the Herald, gives the following interesting statements concerning women executed in Cumberland county:

The records of the court of oyer and terminer for Cumberland county for the years 1790-98, pages 2-12 gives an account of two women who were executed for murder in this county.

The first case was Sarah Clark, a young girl who was born near Carlisle about 1766, and had lived as a servant in several families from her eleventh year. While residing with John Douglas, near Hogestown, she became jealous of Ann, a daughter of John Carothers, in the same neighborhood, and in order to make away with her poisoned the whole Carothers family. John died February 26, 1798, and his wife soon afterwards, but Ann survived. Two other ineffectual attempts were made to take the life of Ann by poison, in the last of which Sallie was discovered, arrested, tried, found guilty of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be hung at the October term of oyer and terminer in Carlisle in 1798. The President judge was James Riddle and the associate judges were Jonathan Hoge, Samuel Laird and John Montgomery. The whole incident was made the subject of a poetical composition by Miss Isabella Oliver, afterwards Mrs. Alexander Sharpe which was published near that time in a volume of poems by her, introduced by Dr. Robert Davidson and printed at Carlisle by Archibald Loudon.

The second case was that of the negro Chloe, who was arraigned at the March term of oyer and terminer, 1801, before Hon. John Joseph Henry, president judge; Samuel Laird, John Creig and William Moore, associates. This woman was a slave in the family of Mary Carothers, the widow of Andrew Carothers, and being left at home in charge of the children, while the family were at church on the Sabbath, drowned one of them in a small stream of water. On a subsequent occasion when reproved by her mistress, she threatened the other child in language which awakened suspicion. She was tried and found guilty of murder in the first degree, and at the June term of the court was sentenced to be hung

Both these sentences were carried into execution at Carlisle, soon after they were passed. Both criminals confessed their guilt and related the facts in accordance with the above statements.

A four-pronged buck pursued by a dog leaped from a ledge of rocks above the station house at Kittanning Point to the railroad track below, a distance of 176 feet, and was instantly killed.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of every sufferer. He says: "In the fall of 1876 when I was taken with a Violent Bleeding of the Lungs followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not lift my bed. In the Summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have for three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it so that every one afflicted with diseased lungs will be induced to take Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work. Sold by druggists. Take Wm. Hall's Balsam only—Beware of counterfeits. oct.18-1'eow

Our Questions.

Are you a buyer of Men's or Boys' Clothing at retail? Do you need clothing for the farm, the office, the work-shop, the court-room, or the pulpit? Do you want boys' clothing for the school-room, or for dress? Do you prefer to buy clothing ready-made or to order? Are you in need of shirts?

If yes, to any or all of these queries, state your needs to us, that we may send you samples and prices.

Your Question

is, Will this pay for the trouble? You must judge. We will make up the case,—you must decide it. But we must tell you that we have created the Largest Retail Clothing Business in the United States by the simple method of giving the best clothing for the least money. We mean that it shall pay you to buy of us. If you buy and are not pleased, return the goods for exchange, or demand your money.

Indians as They Are.

We clip the following from the Benton Record, of Montanna Territory, and reprinted by the Jeffersonian. It is an expression of the situation our Indians sustain. This article comes direct from amongst those who see the doings of the red man.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE RECORD:—Lo, the poor Indian! How often do we see this sentence derisively quoted in our different papers and periodicals. Only recently there appeared in a caricature in Harper's Weekly representing a party of Indians dancing around a white man, whom they had just killed and scalped, and under it was written: 'Lo, the poor Indian!' The caricature was intended to portray the sentiments of an editorial on Indian affairs, wherein the Indians were represented as men worse than beasts, who deserved killing off instead of being well cared for by the government, as the only returns they made for our generous provision for them was to butcher every unprotected white man they could find.

Some years ago an eminent statesman in a speech on Indian affairs said: 'In the beginning God made the land and gave it to the Indians.' Assuming that this is true, let us see what we have done to gain the hatred of the Indians. With the notable exception of the William Penn treaty, about all the land the white people live upon belonged to the Indians and was taken from them either by force or fraudulent means. We have driven them from their homes and the graves of their ancestors; we have watonly destroyed the buffalo and other animals which were food, shelter and clothing to them. In exchange for all the valuable land we have taken from them, the Indian Territory has been given them; and now, not satisfied with our millions of acres of unoccupied lands, we wish to take that from them also. And the few tribes which yet live upon their ancestral soil are envied, and steps are being taken to deprive them of it.

'Lo, the poor Indian!' We have given you cause to murder us. The amount of our blood you have shed is no compensation for the injuries we have done you: and yet on every hand we hear the Christian exclaim: 'Kill 'em all!' 'Wipe 'em out!' 'They're dogs!' 'They don't know how to use the land.' If God made the white man He made the Indian. He made the white man to live as a civilized being and the Indian to live by the pursuit of the chase; but we have deprived them of that employment, and now comes the question: What is to be done with the Indian? But before we answer that question let us see what is being done with them now. Our Eastern people and those of the West who have had no opportunity to look at the situation, will reply: 'Oh, they have more than they deserve; the Crows receive an annuity of $100,000 per year, the Piegans $40,000, etc., etc.' No, they do not. They are supposed to receive that amount, and the money is from the U. S. Treasury to individuals who are supposed to distribute it among them in the shape of provisions, clothing and general merchandise. But I repeat, they do not receive that amount—probably not one-quarter of it. Where does this money go? Not being versed in the intricacies of political stealing I cannot say for sure, but the agents at heart know, because they receive the goods for the Indians, know the amounts and how much they are worth; so we may safely assert that the agents know of and connive the stealings. The Indians know they are being robbed, for plenty of white men talk with them about it; and to my certain knowledge, many white men have advised certain Indians in this Territory to kill their agent in the hope of getting a better one. To my certain knowledge, no blankets were issued to these Indians last summer, and I know that their weekly rations lasted only from two to three days, when they were supposed to have plenty to keep them until the next issue. And when the Indians remonstrated with the agent on the state of affairs he would reply, 'Pooh, pooh! Go away, go away! You have plenty, you have plenty!' And then they would turn away with a sinking heart and a fierce gleam in their eyes which boded no good to the agent. If it were not for the buffalo and small game from which they manage to get a scanty living, God knows what they would do, or where they would stop. There would be death and desolation on many a hearth-stone which burns with fancied secneity.

And now comes the question. What are we to do with the Indians? We know that they are not capable of taking care of themselves and battling for their livelihood with their sharp white brothers; we know that as affairs stand at present, they do not receive their annuities—annuities large enough to keep them in comfortable circumstances the year round. That being the case, let us suggest a change of Indian affairs. Let us do away with Indian agents and give the United States army full control of the Indians and their affairs; then they would receive every dollar due them. Let us keep them on their reservations; show them how to build houses; give them plows and farming implements, some stock cattle and horses, and they will live peacefully and contentedly. That the Indians are anxious to live this way is evident to all who have talked with them on the subject. Last summer several head chiefs of the——tribe came to us in great excitement and said that they had heard that the reservation was going to be taken away from them. We assured them that it could not be done without their consent. With tears standing in his eyes an old, white headed cheif stood up and said: "We don't want to leave here. Our tribe has lived here since the great spirit made them. Look at those mountains. They have been fathers to us; we love them, and our eyes would ache if we could see them no more. Once we owned the world [meaning the whole Northwest Territory,] but the white man has driven us back and back until we can go no further, and now we only own enough land to live on. The buffalo are gone. We have no more use for our guns. We are now obliged to live on the white men: but they starve us. We are anxious to live like the white man. We want to have houses, cattle and potatoes. If the Great White Chief will only take away our agent and put soldiers in his place; if he will give us what belongs to us—help us to build houses and show us how to farm, we will ask no more. When we think of years gone by and of the present time our hearts are sad, and we almost wish to die; when we think of what we were and what we are, our strength leaves us and our ambition is gone."

The old chief was right. His opinions were more to the point than all the speeches which have ever been made in Congress. It was practical. Our statesmen's are only theortical.

Hayes and his Mania for Ohio Men.

From the Chicago Tribune (Rep)

It is rarely that a man at an advanced state of life can reach out above or beyond his personal associations. President Hayes, unfortunately, never enjoyed the advantage of any acquaintance outside of Ohio. The men with whom he had come in contact within Ohio circles were the best men he ever knew. Consequently he concluded that the best men in this whole Union must be Ohio men. He went into office determined to fill the civil service with the best men, and he naturally, from his restricted circle of acquaintance, looked to Ohio to furnish them. He abandoned the previous practice of taking counsel with Congressmen simply because they were Congressmen, and has confined himself to Ohio influences. If he wanted a good Supreme Judge or a good whiskey gauger he recurred immediately to Ohio as likely to furnish the best material. If offices were to be filled at Washington or in some State unfortunately remote from Ohio his first thought would be to ascertain whether some man could be found there who he had formerly known in Ohio. It was only by this course that President Hayes could satisfy his own conscience that he was making proper appointments. It may have been unfortunate for some people who were not "Ohio men" that President Hayes had a conscience, or that, having a conscience, it had been so strictly schooled to the Ohio idea, but he could not reasonably be expected to strangle his conscience on that account. He has done the best he could—for Ohio.

No Good Preaching.

No man can do a good job of work, preach a good sermon, try a law suit well doctor a patient, or write a good article when he feels miserable and dull, with sluggish brain and unsteady nerves, and none should make the attempt in such a condition when it can be so easily and cheaply removed by a little Hop Bitters. See other column.—Albany Times.

General Grant's house at Gelena is in charge of an old soldier and his wife, who take pride in keeping it in perfect order. Many of the presents bestowed upon the General and Mrs Grant during their sojourn in China and Japan are to be seen in the parlor and library.

A Foolish Mistake.

Don't make the mistake of confounding a remedy of acknowledged merit with the numerous quack medicines that are now so common. We speak from experience when we say that Parker's Ginger Tonic is a startling health restorative and will do all that is claimed for it We have used it ourselves with the happiest results for Rehumatism and when worn out by overwork. See adv.—Times.

Jewish Strength in America.

The result of the first systematic attempt to ascertain the strength of Judaism on this continent has just been published. Altogether, returns received from 1000 places to show that in 1878 there were 78 congregations, with a membership of 12,546, and that the number of Israelites was 230,557. Making allowance for the places not heard from, the total Jewish population is placed at 250,000 souls. Of these, about 12,000 are located in Pennsylvania. The oldest congregation in the country is the Shaaray Shomayim, of Lancaster, organized in 1776, while the Rodef Shalom, of Philadelphia, is the next oldest, having been organized in 1780. The richest congregation is the Temple Emanuel, of New York, which although only established in 1843, and having but 462 members, owns real estate and other property to the value of $700,000. The public institutions established by the sect in the United States include five hospitals, eleven orphan asylums and six free schools. Its doctrines are enunciated by seventeen newspapers and magazines. The 278 congregations in America own between them property valued $6,750,000, and over 13,000 children attend the religious schools.

SLIGHTLY EXHILARATED.

'Re-fol-de Riddle! How well I feel!' chirped an elderly bachelor t'other morning. 'That Thomas' Eclectric Oil seems to have cured my lumbago completely. I feel as if I were young again and believe I'll ask the widow to have me.' He did so, was accepted and is now the happy parent of a fine boy.

James Anthony Froude, the historian, has been making a study of the Ireland. He has little sympathy with the sentimental aspects of the Irish grievances, but he gives his judgment of the only way of dealing with Ireland in these remarkable terms:

We can govern India; we cannot govern Ireland. Be it so. Then let Ireland be free. * * We cannot keep people chained to us to be perenially wretched because it is not independent Ireland the ablest and strongest would come to the front and the baser elements be crushed. * * This, too, is called impossible—yet, if we will neither, rule Ireland nor allow the Irish to rule themselves, nature and fact may tell us that, whather we will or no, an experiment which has lasted for seven hundred years shall be tried no longer, Worth Remembering.

Now that good times are again upon us, before indulging in extravagant shows, it is worth remebering that no one can enjoy the pleasantest surroundings if in bad health. There are hundreds of miserable people going about to-day with disordered stomach, liver or kidneys, or a dry, hacking cough, and one foot in the grave, when a 50 cents. bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic would do them more good than all the expensive doctors and quack medicines they have ever tried. It always makes the blood pure and rich and will build you up and give you good health at little cost. Read of it in another column.

MRS. LYDIA E. PINKHAM.
OF LYNN, MASS.

DISCOVERER OF
LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.
The Positive Cure
For all Female Complaints.

This preparation, as its name signifies, consists of Vegetable Properties that are harmless to the most delicate invalid. Upon one trial the merits of this Compound will be recognized, as relief is immediate; and when its use is continued, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, a permanent cure is effected, as thousands will testify. On account of its proven merits, it is to-day recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country.

It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life. It will dissolve and expel tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development. The tendency to cancerous humors there is checked very speedily by its use.

In fact it has proved to be the greatest and best remedy that has ever been digovered. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach

It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

ATTENTION FARMERS!
In calling your attention to our new
COMBINED HINGE & ROLLER FOR FARM GATES,
We wish it fully understood that we are not offering a "patent gate," or any other humbug, and you have no farm rights to buy. We do, however, invite every intelligent and practical farmer in the county to an examination of what we are confident you will consider the VERY BEST DAVICE EVER INVENTED for hanging common board or farm gates. By using the COMBINED HINGE AND ROLLER, with half a dozen fence boards and a few nails, any one can, in a few minutes, make a gate that will work easier, last longer, cost less, and prove more satisfactory than any gate used on the farm. A gate hung with the Hinge and Roller requires no bracing, for it has no tendency to sag, nor will it loosen or draw the posts over, therefore only light posts are required. It is very easily operated, and can be set to allow small animals to pass through, and at the same time keep larger ones back. Also, you may have two gates in one by making your gates of 16 feet lumber, have a small 4 feet gate to go through on foot or horseback and a 12 feet gate, or the hinge and roller can be put on the gate you already have IT SAVES MONEY, TIME AND LABOR, and is just what is wanted on every farm as proven by thousands that are being used wherever it has been introduced.

I want good men in every township to sell the Hinge and Roller. Retail price $1. Liberal discount to dealers. WM. G. ALEXANDER, Inventor and Patentee.
